In China, there is a saying, the United States is the beacon of world civilization, so they called the United States as a "Lighthouse country."

So they have a special kind of goodwill to the United States, the same Americans have a good impression that the Americans warm and straightforward.

Most of the time, they do not care if an American is rich, but whether he really conforms to the American spirit, "free, open."

Of course, most Americans do pursue freedom and openness.
